PEACEMAKING AND THE LIFE OF THE SPIRIT

a series of three weekend workshops with Dan Snyder

at Common Light Meetingplace
137 Center Avenue
Black Mountain, North Carolina

November 12–14, 2004

Nonviolence in Personal and Political Life

Nonviolence is a powerful method of addressing both the violence in the global political world and the violence within. In this workshop we will explore what happens when conflict is waged violently, what happens when it is waged nonviolently, and how the means of conflict make all the difference in the end. We will move frequently across the apparent boundaries between politics, theology, psychology and spirituality.

February 25–27, 2005

Prayer and Peacemaking

How does engagement in pressing social needs lead to a deepening spirituality? How does a prayerful life lead to more discerning engagement in the world? We will consider the interconnections of inward and outward disciplines as they inform the lives of spiritually grounded peacemakers. We will reflect on how God's nonviolent Presence within empowers us for nonviolent relationships.

March 18–20, 2005

Forgiveness and Reconciliation

When is forgiveness a "spiritual bypass" that fails to reach the depths of true healing and when is it truly transformative? In this course we will look at the spiritual, psychological and political dynamics of forgiveness and reconciliation in our search for an answer to this question. Taking nonviolence as our model, we will examine ways to apply the dynamics of radical forgiveness within our own personal and political contexts.

About the Teacher

Daniel O. Snyder is on the faculty at Pendle Hill, the national Quaker study and retreat center near Philadelphia, Pennsylvania. Formerly a pastoral counselor in private practice, Dan has a Ph.D. in clinical psychology, masters degrees in religious studies from Earlham School of Religion and Boston University School of Theology, and B.A. from Guilford College. His research has focused on the dialogue between archetypal psychology and Christian spirituality, and on the relationship between spirituality and nonviolence.

About Registration

Fee for each weekend in this series (meals included) is $125. For a reduced rate of $300 for three weekends, register in advance for the series as a whole. Those for whom this amount is too challenging are encouraged to ask for information about scholarship assistance.
